Milan, June 13.

The 11th Instant the Queen of Spain made her publick Entry into this City, with great Solemnities, in the following Manner.

ABOUT 4 Clock in the Afternoon her Majesty went privately out of the Gate of Tosa to that call'd the Roman Gate, where were set up several Magnificent Tents splendidly adorn'd and furnish'd, and provided with all Manner of exquisite Retirements; in which Tents the Royal Tribunals, and those of the City, with the Colleges, waited her Majesty's coming. The Great Chancellor, representing the Government, dismounting according to Custom, her Majesty was receiv'd at the Gate, which was beautifully gilded and painted with ingenious Devices and Inscriptions of auspicious Import, by the Chapter of this Metropolis, who presented the Cross to her Majesty which she kiss'd with Devotion. A treble Discharge of small Mortars, and Cannon drawn out of our Castle and plac'd on the Walls, gave Notice to the whole City of her Majesty's Entrance; and during her Passage the Guns of the Castle fir'd incessantly, though for the loud Acclamations of the People they could hardly be heard. The Streets through which her Majesty pass'd, (from the Gate at which she was introduced, to the Cathedral,) were lin'd by the City Militia, all in their richest Accoutrements, wearing Laurel in their Hats; together with many Gentlemen and Officers, in splendid Habits, attended by great Numbers of Footmen cloath'd in rich Liveries. The Houses and Scaffolds, were hung with Tapistry, and fill'd with Ladies.

The March was begun by 4 of her Majesty's Trumpets, follow'd by the Officers of the Posts and Couriers, led by the Lieutenant Giacinto Allario, preceded by six Postilions in Liveries of green Cloth lac'd with Silver, and wearing the Badge of their Office, and by ten Couriers very handsomely cloath'd and equip'd. The Lieutenant was attended by Footmen, in the same Liveries as the Postilions, and accompany'd by six Officers of the said Office: The Treasurer Don Francesco Stoppani Superintendent of the Office, was absent; being oblig'd to go, with Commissions extraordinarily deputed, to the House and Estate lately possess'd by the Count di Vaila who died a few Days before.

Next march'd the Regiment of German Horse of General Don Annibale Visconti, all the Officers of which had noble Equipages. Then came a great Number of the Nobility, mounted on excellent Horses, with rich Accoutrements, Habits, and Servants in new Livres lac'd with Gold and Silver. They were follow'd by the Officers of Count Hamilton's Regiment of Dragoons, all in Scarlet, embroidered or galloon'd, some with Gold, others with Silver. After these came the College of Physicians, the Lawyers, the Council of Sixty, and the twelve Inspectors of Provisions, with their Presidents; those of the Gown being distinguish'd by the Fashion of their Robes, and the others being preceded by their Trumpets on Horseback, and Household-Porters on Foot, themselves wearing the richest Habits imaginable. Next in Order were, the extraordinary Magistrates with the Fiscals as well of the long as of the short Robe, the ordinary Magistrates, the Judges with the Prefect of Justice, the Senate, the great Chancellor, all on Horseback with Foot-Clothes and Trappings of black Velvet fring'd with Gold and Silver, their Household Porters on Foot being all cloath'd in purple Damask with Chains of Gold. These were follow'd by the numerous Livery of her Majesty's Household, which was of Yellow Cloath cover'd with Silver Galloon. Next came the Gentlemen of the Golden Key; then the Grandees of Spain with led-Horses and numerous Liveries. Under a Royal Canopy of Silver Tissue, born up by the forementioned Colleges, and preceded and follow'd by the Company of Lances with their Captain and Lieutenant on Horseback, appear'd Her Majesty, seated in an open Litter, which was a Master-piece of Art painted with an Intermixture of Azure Gold and Silver: On one Side of Her Majesty was his Highness the Bishop of Osnaburg and Olmutz Prince of Lorrain, whose Retinue were in Liveries trim'd with Gold; and on the other the Count de Molart Master of the Horse to her Majesty. The Maggiore-duoma Maggiore follow'd in a Coach; and after her the other Ladies of the Court, in Her Majesty's Coaches of State and in those of his Highness. The March was clos'd by the Troop of Guards in new Accoutrements, commanded by Count Don Antonio della Somaglia, who made a splendid Appearance, as did all the other Officers.

Her Majesty coming by the Prison call'd the Rocchetta at the Roman Gate, gave Proof of her great Clemency, by causing about 300 Delinquents to be set at Liberty. Being come to the Door of the Cathedral, on the Square before which the German Horse and the Guards form'd themselves into Squadrons, in the midst of a multitude of People, she alighted from her Litter, and was received at the first Step by Cardinal Archinto our Archbishop, accompanied by the four Bishops of Novara, Cremona, Lodi, and Vigevano, by all the metropolitan Chapter, and by the Principals of the Seminaries and the Swiss College. Her Majesty being led up to the Steps of the high Altar, Te Deum was sung, and a triple Salvo given by the Cannon of the Castle (which was also repeated in the Evening;) and the usual Service being ended, the Cardinal Archbishop reconducted her to her Coach, which carried her to the Royal Palace; where the Adjutant General Baron Don Francesco Spinola, commanding the Guards at the Gate, saluted her with the military Musick of Trumpets and Drums, and with a triple Salvo of small Mortars.

That Evening and the two following, the Royal Palace and the whole City were illuminated. The Rector and Deputies who have the Inspection of the Building of the Dome, caus'd a large Machine containing divers Figures, to be erected over the principal Door, which supporting a learned Inscription in Praise of the Royal Pair, had on each side an Imperial Eagle with the Arms of the House of Austria: And about them abundance of Lights were plac'd, which illuminated two waving Scrolls bearing their Majesty's Names. The Front, the Piazza, and the great Choir of the Dome, were also illuminated,
